The Journal for the Study of Postsecondary and Tertiary Education (JSPTE) is scholarly peer-reviewed journal that publishes manuscripts that address various issues related to the advancement of the field of higher and postsecondary education and higher education preparation programs in particular. JSPTE is published online free of charge on the web site <http://JSPTE.org> and available in print.

Over the past 120-years the field of higher and postsecondary education has grown to include approximately 300 graduate programs globally. Higher and postsecondary education is a multidisciplinary field of study with a broad range of specializations, preparing graduates for a diverse range of career paths. The field draws from various disciplines across the social sciences and the humanities. And sub-specializations in areas such as higher education leadership and administration, student affairs administration, business affairs, international higher education, and community college administration have grown within this multidisciplinary field of study.

Each volume may include four types of manuscripts:

- 1) Original research based on quantitative, qualitative, mixed methods, or historical methodologies (word limit: 9,000);
- 2) Opinion and rapid response essays offering commentary on higher and tertiary education as field of study (word limit: 2,000);
- 3) International forum consisting of short submissions from program leaders on promising practices, developments, or changes currently underway internationally in higher and postsecondary education graduate programs (word limit: 500); and
- 4) Book/policy reviews focused on contemporary publications with direct relevance to the field (word limit: 5,000).
